

Baha'i hits the right note with faithful

25th Sep 2015 5:00 AM

Singers from around the world unite at the Baha'i House of Worship in Sydney (above). They included Warwick's June Lincoln and Graeme Eldridge (right).

WARWICK Baha'is June Lincoln and Graeme Eldridge participated in the inaugural Australian Baha'i Choral Festival, held in Sydney at the Baha'i House of Worship at Mona Vale on September 6.

More than 75 singers from all over Australia, Germany, Kosovo, New Zealand and the United States, learned the music in their homes and came together for three days of intensive rehearsals to bring together this beautiful concert of sacred music in many different languages and styles.

"The three days of rehearsal from 9 in the morning until 9 at night was very intense and tiring but very uplifting at the same time," said Graeme.

"Meeting and singing with other Baha'is from around Australia and overseas was a wonderful experience."

The concert was enjoyed by more than 500 people and the ABC recorded the event for its Radio National program, The Rhythm Divine, which was broadcast on Sunday 13 September and is still available online.

The concert was held in partnership with the Sydney Sacred Music Festival and is planned to be an annual event.

ADVERTISEMENT

TRAVELMARVEL Live Your Dream IN 2016
SALE ENDS 8 APRIL

Canada & Alaska 2016

Save up to $1,000* per couple BOOK NOW
*Conditions apply.

JUST IN

Keith, Lee and Adam win big at CMC Music Awards

Stolen Isis documents name 22,000 foreign fighters

Jury deliberates over brutal alleged murder

Man, 40, charged with arson over Beerwah fires

US pro-gun activist shot by 4-year-old son

Ten years jail for sadistic, brutal torture